Customer Reviews

The rate of learning is slow enough that you won't really need to press the pause button... contrary to what the back cover says, there is a lot of repetition of the same words involved - Pimsleur calls it "saturation". But they substitute words around where possible so you don't repeat the exact same phrase more than a few times in a row. The first CD is very simple indeed. The whole 60 minutes is taken up with just a handful of phrases (english equivalent): Do you speak? / do you understand? / I speak / a little / I speak a little spanish / you speak a little spanish / I don't speak / you don't speak english / no seÃ orita / are you North American? / Yes seÃ or / thankyou / how are you? / very good / good thanks / you speak spanish very well / good day...That's about all the content there is on the first CD, but there are several variations of the theme -word substitution- so it is a very slow rate of learning. In comparison, there is ~10 times as much content on virtually any of the other spanish audio CDs I have reviewed. According to the 3 CD set "Learn in your car spanish", that product conatins 600+ words. Whereas "Pimsleur quick & simple spanish" contains only 75 words. The good news is- I don't think I'll ever forget these phrases now, I believe they've been firmly etched in my brain. I.e. permanently! But I had already been exposed to these words previously, so I found it all rather boring. At this rate, I don't think I'll learn much more new information from the remaining CDs. Thus, I can only recommend this for people that know practically no spanish to begin with. Start here and follow up with other spanish audio products.
